I am using the delegate function to attach a handler to a click event to each of the loaded elements, but when I click one of the dynamically loaded elements, my handler does not fire. However, if I manually add the same element to the DOM, the click handler is properly attached and invoked. I'm thinking it has something to do with the fact that I am dynamically loading the elements, and they don't really exist on the page yet, but I don't really know. Here is my code:

```
$("#MessageDiv").append($("#MessageDiv").html()); A: You need to use event delegation for this, document is a more suitable root than body. $("body").on('click', '.clicked', function() { console.log('clicked'); });

$("#MessageDiv").append($("#MessageDiv").html()); Loading Fiddle: 2 Answers 2 You should also allow it to eat away at the glass, but you also want to avoid eating into the wood itself. You'll want to get a bunch
